

Four Townships Are Quarantined; Rabies Spreads

State Health Officer Says There Is Danger That Disease Might Affect Greene County Names Townships

Shawangunk, Marlborough, Gardiner and Plattekill Are Watched

With four townships in Ulster county under quarantine for rabies among dogs there is danger of further extension of the disease not only in Ulster county but in Greene county, according to Dr. Hollis S. Ingraham, district state health officer. So far no cases of rabies have been reported among the dog population of Kingston.

The first case of rabies was reported last August in the town of Shawangunk, and within a period of two months the disease among dogs had spread to the townships of Gardiner, Plattekill and Marlborough.

Dr. Ingraham said that approximately there had been a dozen rabid dogs found in those townships, and in all of the towns, except Gardiner, rabid dogs had been found within the past week or so. Rabid dogs in the four townships under quarantine have bitten about the same number of persons. Those bitten, however, were promptly treated, and have suffered no ill effects.

Dr. Ingraham said that the quarantine would be continued in force owing to the fact that rabid dogs have been found recently in three of the towns under quarantine.

Orange Is Quarantined In Orange county, he said, there was also a dog quarantine where the number of rabid dogs was larger than in Ulster county.

There are several facts about rabid dogs which Dr. Ingraham would like very much to have impressed upon not only the authorities but the general public.

Dies in Few Days

A dog, if rabid, invariably dies within a few days after the appearance of illness. It is possible for a dog's saliva to be infectious for a short time before he becomes sick, but it may be taken as a safe rule that any dog which survives for a week after biting could not have transmitted rabies at that biting.

Laboratory examination of the dog's head does not always definitely show that the dog has rabies even when it is in fact rabid.

On the other hand, if a dog is kept under observation by a competent veterinarian for a week, a definite diagnosis can almost invariably be made.

Thus, if a dog has bitten a person and is immediately killed, it may never be found out whether or not the dog is rabid and the person will have to be subjected to a strenuous and expensive course of antirabic treatment, frequently at town expense, whereas if the dog is kept alive and under observation the question will be definitely decided. If the dog lives for a week, there is no danger of that person developing rabies.

It is particularly important that the dog should not be shot through the head as this makes it practically impossible to examine the head for the presence of rabies. The important thing in trying to capture a suspected rabid dog is that under no circumstances should the dog be killed if it can safely be procured alive, and in any event, the beast should not be shot through the head. A heart shot is practically as effective and does not ruin the head for laboratory examination.

As soon as the dog is captured or shot, or before if possible, the health officer should be notified.

Mellert Resigns As Health Board Member Thursday

Babcock Farms Manager in Letter Cites Reason; Complies With Law Passed by State

WILLIAM MELLERT

William Mellert has resigned as a member of the board of health. Following is a copy of the communication sent by Mr. Mellert to Mayor Heiselman and the common council notifying them of his resignation from the local health board:

January 25, 1940.
Hon. C. J. Heiselman, Mayor, and the Honorable Common Council of the City of Kingston, N. Y.
Gentlemen:

I hereby resign as a member of the Board of Health, effective January 25, 1940.

It has been the policy of the Board of Education to rotate milk purchases for the city schools among the milk dealers of the city. Commencing on February 1st, it will be the turn of the Babcock Farms, of which I am the manager, to supply the board of education with milk for the first term of 1940.

The state law prohibits any member of a city board to be a party to any city contract. In order to comply with that law, and in order not to deprive Babcock Farms of the privilege of supplying milk to the Board of Education, I am compelled, with regret to resign.

I wish to assure you that I have enjoyed serving the city as a member of the board of health and my best wishes go to you for a continuation of your splendid service to the City of Kingston and its people.

Yours truly,

WILLIAM MELLERT

Frank Patruno Is Denied Right To Recover $20,000 for Property

Justice Harry E. Schirick has denied the right of Frank Patruno to recover from the city of New York $20,000 damages for loss of business at his County Line Inn on the Montela road by reason of the taking of the land for the new Upper Rondout water project. Manuel Dittenheimer appeared for the claimant who has already been awarded $14,048 for real property taken.

Patruno filed a claim for $20,000 for loss of business and the claim was heard before Delaware Section 8 commissioners of appraisal, who disallowed the claim for loss of business.

South African Parliament Rejects Move to Declare Peace With Nazis

(By The Associated Press) A crushing defeat of Russians northeast of Lake Ladoga with the capture of huge quantities of tanks and other war materials by the Finns was reported today by unofficial Finnish sources.

These reports said the Russians, desperately trying to escape from an icy trap into which Field Marshal Baron Mannerheim's generals had led them, had abandoned hundreds of tanks, armored cars, motorized anti-aircraft guns and other artillery.

More Red army material was said to have been destroyed. How many Russian soldiers froze to death, were killed or died of starvation still was unclear, the Finns said, but the belief here was that only a fraction of four divisions engaged in a long-drawn battle in that area had escaped.

Tonight's army communique was terse and non-committal, saying only that attacks at various points northeast of Lake Ladoga had been repulsed and "some of the attacking detachments were dispersed in entirety."

Heiselman Issues Appeal for Help

Asks All Citizens to Aid in Fight to Overcome Infantile Paralysis

Mayor C. J. Heiselman today issued the following proclamation asking citizens to contribute to the March-of-Dimes drive and to support the President's birthday ball to be held January 30:

Proclamation

Whereas, the Ulster County Committee for the Celebration of the President's Birthday, held under the auspices of the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis, Inc., will sponsor a Birthday Ball on the night of Tuesday, January 30, at The Barn, just across the Washington avenue viaduct, for the purpose of raising funds to fight against the "maiming death" of infantile paralysis, and

Whereas, there are a great many citizens who thoroughly approve and wish to support the fight against this dread disease, but who are unable to attend the ball,

Therefore be it Resolved that today (Saturday, January 27th), be set aside as a day on which such interested citizens may contribute ten cents to this worthy cause and receive a "Fight Infantile Paralysis" button in return, and I therefore hereby designate Saturday, January 27th, as March of Dimes Day, and urge all citizens who can possibly do so to contribute to this worthy cause. Containers to receive dimes have been placed in all stores.

Upon concluding the present campaign, 50 per cent of the funds now raised will be retained by our county chapter and will be used to give immediate aid to those suffering from the terrible affliction of this dread disease.

I give this movement my fullest approval and most enthusiastic endorsement and urge all citizens to unite in this fight against infantile paralysis by generously supporting the work of the committee.

In testimony whereof, I have hereunto signed my name officially and caused the seal of the city of Kingston to be impressed hereon, this 26th day of January, 1940.

CONRAD J. HEISELMAN,

Mayor.

P. S. C. to Decide Upon Grade Crossing Problem

THAT for Your Uncle Ezra: It's Known as RoseNdale, Mr. Thomas

Open suggestion to Lowell Thomas:

Pawling, as the crow flies, is only about 40 miles or so from Ulster county. Pawling was settled by the Pawling family which lived on the Kingston-Ellenville road in the town of Marlborough.

Despite its Aborigine-Dutch background most names in Ulster county are phonetically simple, easy to remember and as easily pronounced. Indian and Netherland names have been Anglicized for the most part.

Ulster county thanks Mr. Thomas for his Friday broadcast in which he spoke of the scheduled New York State Championship ski jumping which the Telemark Ski Club was forced to cancel for Sunday.

There's only one exception: The village is Rosendale, not "RoseNdale." And it was Rosendale long before a certain mythical hick radio station began to operate on national air waves.

South Is Weary Of Snow and Cold

Gay Greeting Palls as Folk Down in Dixie Hope for More Moderate Days

New Orleans, Jan. 27 (AP).—Shivering southerners, gaily greeting a record snowstorm that wearily of it all after four days costly to business and crops, were cheered today by promises of slowly moderating weather in a cotton country unaccustomed and unprepared for severe cold waves.

Hampered further by ice-glazed streets and highways, the sun-loving south struggled back toward normalcy with its losses running into millions of dollars. No one would make estimates, but it was agreed that damages to property, vegetables, highways and the rich fruit crops would run high.

The nation, whipped by frigid blasts from the Rockies to the Atlantic coast, counted its two-week death toll at 366, including 105 this week, as attributable to the weather.

Sub-zero and freezing weather continued deep in the southland, keeping many thousands of school children at home, but forecasts were for slightly warmer weather tomorrow. Traffic was hazardous and many rural sections were isolated.

Business Is Slow

Housewives left home only for necessities, slowing retail business to a walk. Construction was virtually suspended.

Florida citrus growers, fearing heavy damage, fired smudge pots. Texas, Florida and gulf coast farmers could not estimate the millions believed lost in their citrus and vegetable crops. Livestock suffered.

January Proves Frigid Month

Highest Reading in City Is 34 Degrees; Mercury Hovers Near Zero

Cold weather which has gripped the city since January 15, still continues with the official city thermometer at the city hall recording a low of 7 degrees this morning, which is five degrees colder than Friday morning when a low of 12 above was reported.

The highest temperature recorded by the official city thermometer on Friday afternoon was 23 degrees.

So far this month the official city thermometer has recorded but two times that subzero temperatures gripped the city. On January 7 and 10, a recording of 1 degree below zero was reported.

January 13, 14 and 15, were the warmest days so far experienced this month with recordings of 32 to 34 degrees reported.

Aside from these three warm days continuous cold weather close to the zero mark has been reported in Kingston all month in the city.

While the city thermometer was recording close to zero this morning thermometers elsewhere in the city recorded as low as zero.

Expatriation of Pact Gives U. S. Right to Raise Duties on All Nipponese Imports

Tokyo Is Quiet

Japanese Press Is Mild and Exchange Normal; Party Passes Resolution

Washington, Jan. 27 (AP).—Respect for American rights is the price which Japan must pay, officials here say, if she wants a new treaty guaranteeing her trade against discriminatory treatment by the United States.

The Japanese-American commercial treaty of 1911, which pledged both countries not to discriminate against trade of the other, expired at midnight last night.

It had been abrogated by Secretary Hull last July, following repeated interference by the Japanese with American interests in China.

Expiration of the pact leaves President Roosevelt free to raise duties on Japanese imports, if he finds that Japan is discriminating against the United States; to impose a complete embargo on Japanese imports if the discrimination then continues, and to impose special harbor charges or tonnage rates on Japanese vessels.

United States officials are inclined, however, to "sit tight" for the time being and let Japan make the first move.

Senator Gillette (D., Iowa), a member of the foreign relations committee, contended that before Congress acted on pending embargo measures it should apply the neutrality act to the Sino-Japanese conflict.

"That would not prejudice our neutrality," Gillette said, "and we would have time to consider whether other steps were necessary."

The neutrality act may be invoked either by the President or by Congress. It has not yet been applied to the conflict in China.

If it were both the Japanese and Chinese governments would have to pay cash for all supplies purchased in the United States and transport them in non-American vessels.

Gillette told newsmen that China was receiving virtually no war materials from the United States and that it would be difficult for Japan to continue her present war buying here if she were forced to comply with the neutrality law.

Will Not Yield

Tokyo, Jan. 27 (AP).—Determination that Japan "never will yield to threats" from abroad appeared today as the first reaction to termination by the United States of the 1911 treaty governing trade between the two countries.

This semi-official expression was embodied in a resolution by the Social Mass party, one of Japan's lesser political groups.

On this first day of the non-treaty status, the stock market and other economic barometers remained normal, while the press and public appeared more concerned over the shipping controversy with Great Britain.

The Social Mass resolution said in part:

"Although actual trade relations continue unchanged, we must be prepared for great uncertainty as a result of the non-treaty condition. Japanese, understanding the true objective of the China incident, are determined to overcome all difficulties and never will yield to threats of interference by third powers.

"If the American government fails rightly to understand this determination and continues to threaten Japan, relations between the two countries necessarily will be aggravated."

Although lack of a treaty leaves the United States free to apply pressure on Japanese-American commerce, it was indicated reliably that Japan's vital industries had built up a reserve of materials needed to maintain normal production for at least a year.

Japan was keenly interested, however, in proposals in the United States Senate for an embargo on exports to Japan.

It was indicated in high quarters that Japan would make no particular efforts for a new agreement immediately, but would try to prevent incidents in China involving Americans.

(Nevertheless, in Tientsin, China, Japanese military authorities officially informed the public that effective Sunday the barred wire barricades surrounding the foreign concessions would be electrically charged again, as they previously had been since the start of the blockade of the concessions last June.)

In Shanghai, Japanese army officers took the position that after two and one-half years of fighting, Japan was too deeply concerned in China to yield territorial or economic gains to placate the United States.)

Ching-Wei Declares New Government Will Guarantee Third Power Rights

Tsingtao, China, Jan. 27 (AP).—The central Japanese-controlled government planned for occupied Chinese territory "will guarantee the just rights and interests of third party powers," Wang Ching-Wei declared today.

"It has been decided that a Chinese-Japanese peace will not be detrimental to the legitimate rights of foreigners in China," said the former Chinese premier, who broke with Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek's government a year ago and was chosen central government head by Tokyo.

Wang has campaigned since that time for the Chinese to make peace and accede to Japan's program for a "new order" in east Asia.

Wang made his statement in an interview following a three-day conference with heads of the Nanking and Peiping local governments, dominated by Tokyo.

It was agreed new regime personnel would be named by a central political council at Shanghai probably next month.

Regarding China's foreign loans, Wang said "in general we will have to recognize them, but those illegally made by Chungking will have to be re-examined."

"We will also take over and re-examine the obligations of the Peiping and Nanking provisional governments," he added.

Wang declared Japan would not withdraw troops from China immediately.

Organize Catholic Parishes Here for Charities Appeal

Preliminary steps in organizing the parishes of Ulster county for the annual appeal of Catholic Charities, archdiocese of New York, were taken this week at a luncheon meeting held at the Governor Clinton Hotel and arranged by district chairman, the Very Rev. Martin J. Drury of St. Mary's Church. The pastors were asked to assume direct charge of the appeal in their respective parishes and they, in turn, will appoint parish directors and lay chairmen to organize and direct the workers in their solicitation of funds.

Father Drury stressed the vital importance of the prestige and leadership which the pastors always contribute to the appeal and stated that like effort this year in every parish is essential for success. Their work, he said, would be a fulfillment of the promises of loyalty made to Archbishop Spellman, who, this year for the first time, is sponsoring the appeal.

The Rev. Christopher McCann of St. Peter's Church, New Paltz, district manager for Ulster county, also addressed the meeting and assured the pastors of his assistance with any problems that might arise. Father McCann acts as liaison officer between the pastors and the headquarters staff of Catholic Charities.

A meeting of all the pastors of the archdiocese is scheduled for Tuesday morning, February 1, when they will meet with Archbishop Spellman at Cathedral High School, Manhattan.

Finnish-Americans at Rifton Lend Hands to Cause Abroad

Group Is Formed To Provide Help During Invasion

Women, Men Join Effort to Give Some Assistance to Those in Finland Engaged in War

A disrupted peace extends to many lands like the waves of disturbed waters touching all shores and here in America today the hearts of millions are saddened by the prospects of a retarded civilization born of war.

A sympathetic neighbor always feels deeply the troubles of friends and in this land made up of the peoples of all nations, trouble in most any corner of the world will bring its shadow into the lives of compatriots or kinsfolk who have found the meaning of freedom in the United States.

Everywhere in the nation today efforts are under way to provide as much humane assistance as possible for those now suffering in war-torn lands and most recently organized of such groups here in Ulster county is that of the Finnish colony near Rifton.

Within the past two weeks a group of approximately 35 people representing the 22 families of the colony, organized to aid the cause of Finland and their work already has gained an impressive start.

Like Group Abroad

This group in effect, will function like the Lotta-Svard which in Finland is a sister organization to the Civil Guard. Since their beginning, little more than a week ago, this Rifton group has knitted many pairs of mittens for the Finnish soldiers and have laid plans for much effective work to be done in the future.

The Lotta-Svard, which was named after the heroine of Rusenberg's poems, is known as Finland's defense organization of women. It is headed at present by Fannie Luukkainen, who controls the defense activities of 100,000 Finnish women.

It is estimated now that more than 1,000 branch organizations are functioning under the pressure of the Russian invasion of Finland, and many such groups of Finnish-American women are at work in this country.

Women of every station belong to the organization in Finland. They are of all political parties, and all ages over 17-years-old. It was formed during the "Liberty War" in 1917 and 1918, and has functioned effectively since then.

A Kindred Cause

Those now working at Rifton for the cause of their former countrymen have sisters and mothers doing the same work on a more intensified scale in the Lotta-Svard, and some of the residents in this Ulster county colony have relatives actively engaged in the conflict abroad.

Each week now this Rifton group will meet to report on its progress and to make plans for increased effort. The meetings will be held on Thursday evenings and each time they will convene at a different home in the neighborhood.

General satisfaction was expressed at the meeting Thursday evening of this week with the progress made since they first got together during the previous week. Several pairs of knitted mittens are ready to be sent to New York where they will be shipped abroad by a committee functioning on a national scale.

It is not like the Finnish people to enjoy such tasks as putting an extra "trigger finger" in these mittens they are making, but they feel that the "cause," is one which came to them. It is not one of their own seeking.

A quiet, but effective determination is apparent in the spirit of this local group in their effort to aid those on the other side of the ocean. This same quality now exhibited by the Finnish soldiers in their commendable defense of their homeland, greatly intensified, is described in a word of the native tongue which seems to defy definition.

It Is 'Sisu'

"It is 'Sisu' which will help us win," they say, and nearest approach to describing the meaning of this word is that is something akin to a super-human motivating force. "It is something we have inside," they will tell you.

"Sisu," is indeed a part of the local effort, and the old and young alike are feeling it in their attempt to be of some help. The older men are helping in the knitting and they seem to get along as expertly as the women.

A social time is enjoyed at all such gatherings for the Finns are a sociable people—they like life and all its aspects in the home. Always, too, they have found much enjoyment in outdoor life and they like such regions as that near Rifton, where this interesting group lives, and other such areas of Ulster county.

Pays Dividends

It is this love of the outdoors coupled with the ability of the Finns to stand the low temperatures of Arctic winters, which is proving a big factor in their effective defense against the Russian invasion. Natives of the country in all its regions have become adept at skiing and this sport is now paying its dividends for the Finnish army.

Most of the men in the Rifton colony are carpenters and make their living by this trade. They have comfortable well-built homes, most of which are on the rural roads leading out of Rifton village.

Money raised by this group to date to carry on their work has come from contributions made only by members of their own organization. Last week's meeting

Homes in the Finnish colony near Rifton will reflect much of the activities of the Finnish people abroad during the duration of the current war. Groups like those shown above will continue to meet each week at the various homes of the neighborhood to knit and work to give whatever assistance possible.

brought the initial fund of $29 and with this they purchased the wool with which to knit the mittens. They hope soon to devise a plan to solicit funds outside their organization, but this job, they insist, must be done with as much dignity as possible.

The meeting last Thursday evening was at the home of Edward Keronen, whose family is typical of those in the area.

The women continued their knitting as various plans were discussed to enlarge the scope of the work. An American flag was placed in one corner of the room.

Song Book Shown

During the evening guests at the Keronen home had opportunity to see a book containing a series of Finnish songs translated into English. Many of them evidenced the strong love shown by the Finns for their picturesque nation.

Two or three of the songs in the book showed words for music written by Sibelius, contemporary composer, who is looked upon as a national hero and whose works are favorites among music lovers throughout the world. His "Finlandia," especially is a sacred work to every native Finn, and it is one which enjoys prominence in the world of music.

Pelatkka!

Another song in the book, by a lesser known author, titled "March of the Rustic Army," seems to carry some of the spirit of this nation now at war. It reads as follows:

"We have the snow and the ice, the frost and the night; We have severe commandments from fate. Who is struck by our club, On the ground he remains; The gales have chosen us; The night has confided her secrets to us. The wolf has lent his teeth to us, The lynx his sharp eyes. We have the snow and the ice, the frost and the night. Tremble! Tremble!"

The Finnish word for tremble in this song, here again seems to have its own subtle meaning it is "Pelatkka." It is a word to be used only when war threatens the homes of a happy people.

'BROTHER JOHN' DRAWS CROWD

Crowds grew to such proportions that police had to clear the streets for traffic in Los Angeles when "Brother John," (right) barefooted, bewhiskered habitue of the civic center, passed out more than 1,000 25-cent pieces on Main street. "I'm feeding the hungry," he said.

Flashes of Life Sketched in Brief

(By The Associated Press)

They Got the Rink

Lewiston, Me.—A group of young hockey players unwittingly used a good argument in protesting a ban of the city park rink by the schools superintendent.

Wearing their skates and carrying hockey sticks, they stormed city hall and so scarred the flooring in the superintendent's office and corridor that he hurriedly rescinded the ban to get them out.

Long Distance Planning

Mercer, Pa.—U. S. Sailor Vernon Johnson, far off in Hawaii with a submarine detachment, wants to know how to build a barn.

He wrote Farm Agent C. H. Waha for the information, explaining he owned 65 acres in this county and planned to build a barn on his land.

Waha forwarded a set of plans.

Dress Designing

Taloga, Okla.—Gerald Livingston's Hereford calf was prejudiced against a red-faced nurse cow supplied as a foster mother. The calf would nurse from a white-faced cow, but Whiteface was busy with her own calf.

Gerald tied a white towel around the red-faced cow's head and the calf dropped all protests.

Dead Reckoning

Colorado Springs, Colo.—Richard McKnight, Colorado College student, showed the police judge a sheaf of equation-covered papers to prove he wasn't speeding.

The figuring, a five-hour job, was all right except that Traffic Officer Albert Peterson testified McKnight made a four-block error in computing distance of the chase.

The answer—$12.50 fine.

Tooter Trouble

Evansville, Ill.—James Bruce complained to police that he and his neighbors were unable to sleep because someone's automobile horn was blowing continually.

Police went to Bruce's home to investigate and found the offending car behind his apartment. The machine belonged to Bruce.

Group Indicted On Still Charge

New York, Jan. 26 (Special).—An indictment was handed up to Judge Vincent L. Leibell by a Federal Grand Jury here today charging six men with the possession and operation of an illicit still at the Suomela farm, Esopus, road, Esopus, on January 28, 1937.

The defendants are Jack Bernstein, Nino Bonucelli, John Sobolewski, Carmine J. Rose, alias Deede, Isaac Suomela and James Suomela.

The still was described as one of 1,000-gallon capacity. In another count, the defendants are charged with possession of 22,000 gallons of mash intended for distillation. They will be arraigned shortly for pleading.

National Anthem of Finland

The National Anthem of Finland has been submitted by Ivar Junquist:

OUR LAND

Our land, our land, our fatherland,
Soud loud, O name of worth!
No mount that meets the heaven's hand
No hidden vale, no wave-washed strand,
Is loved as is our native land,
Our own forefathers' earth.

Our land is poor; true, we reply,
For him who covets gold.
The stranger proud may pass us by,
But we our land yet glorify;
For in each crag and fell and wold
A gold-land we behold.

We love our rivers' rushing flight,
Our brooks that purr along,
Our darksome groves whose sighs unite,
Our starry night, our summer light,—
All, all that here, in scene or song,
Did to our hearts belong.

Here was our fathers' combat fought,
With mind, sword, plowshare too;
When light or darkness fortune brought,
In mournful or in joyous lot,
Yet Finland's heart beat ever true,
Bore brave the ills she knew.

And it was here the blood-streams flowed,
They did for us outpour;
Here off their hearts with gladness glowed,
Here were their sighs anon bestowed,
The hearts that once our burdens bore
In distant days of yore.

The sweet, the good, is round us strown,
Ordained us from our birth;
Where'er by fate our lot is thrown,
A land, a fatherland, we own;
What rarer gift is found on earth
To cherish for its worth?

Around us spreads our native land,
Before the eye unrolled;
And we can outward stretch our hand
And joyful gaze o'er sea and strand,
And say, "For us these scenes unfold;
Our fatherland behold!"

If we could dwell in splendor bright
Mid gold-clouds in the blue,
And life-long dance in starry light,
Where tears nor sighs could bring their blight;
Yet to this land we'd turn anew,
With longing ever true.

O land, of thousand lakes the band,
By song and faith so blest,
Where us life's ocean gives a strand,
Our old-time land, our future land,—
Be not of poverty distressed,
Be glad, secure, at rest.

Thy blossom, in the bud laid low,
Yet ripened shall upspring.
See! From our love once more shall grow
Thy light, thy joy, thy hope, thy glow!
And clearer yet one day shall ring
The song our land shall sing!

DIMS AGAINST PARALYSIS

Churches throughout the country will observe Sunday, January 28, as Infantile Paralysis Church Sunday.

The National Infantile Paralysis campaign has been endorsed by the titular heads of ranking prelates of virtually all denominations, as well as by such religious organizations as the Salvation Army, the National Catholic Welfare Conference and the International Society of Christian Endeavor.

At the behest of the Committee for the Celebration of the President's Birthday, clergymen during the day will call attention to the fight against the vicious disease which annually cripples thousands of American children. Congregations will be asked to do their part in the nationwide drive.

One of the finest things about the annual "March of Dimes" into the war chest of the health forces fighting infantile paralysis is the widespread participation of Americans. This year's fund-raising campaign, already under way, has active committees in 2,600 different counties. They are supported and helped by screen stars, celebrities, school children, preachers, editors and many others. The campaign will end with 10,000 or more celebrations throughout the country on January 30, President Roosevelt's birthday.

Funds raised by such campaigns in past years have resulted in the establishment of the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis, a central group which carries on research, fights epidemics, gives aid where needed and in other ways combats both the disease itself and its dangerous aftermath.

These funds have also furthered the building of numerous pools in which victims of "polio" may have the special treatment which has been found so beneficial. They have been used to teach the public that there is hope and a chance to prevent the paralysis or greatly modify it.

Half the money raised in any community stays there for the benefit of local infantile paralysis patients. The other half goes to the Foundation to enable it to continue and extend its valuable work.

TWO SENSIBLE STATES

One interstate trade barrier has been removed by a recent reciprocal agreement between New York and Michigan. The latter state has waived mileage tax fees and registration requirements formerly imposed on truck operators from New York. The latter had been paying minimum fees of $55 for trucks and $30 for trailers. Now trucks from either state will have free use of the other's highways.

In the long run Michigan will gain rather than lose by thus ending discriminatory special charges on "foreign" trucks. The latter will certainly enter Michigan in larger numbers and will spend more money there and stimulate business.

There should be more such agreements between states which have previously choked off trade or privileges from neighbors. Barriers at state borders not only keep out competitors but tend to wall in domestic business that might flourish with freer movement.

FOREIGN TRADE EXHIBITS

The Japanese, it is reported, hold trade exhibitions in their principal cities to display foreign products. The idea is not to induce the Japanese people to buy foreign goods, but to show native manufacturers and exporters what they must compete with.

The Japanese are quick to learn and they frequently pick up from these shows ideas about improving their own products as well as hints of new fields they might enter. They learn what foreign buyers like.

Americans might hesitate to set up such exhibits for fear of advertising the foreign goods. Or they might feel that their own products were already so superior that they could not be improved even to meet foreign requirements. In these days when we are earnestly studying ways of increasing our export trade, such a study of the other countries' products and desires might be greatly beneficial.

USEFUL JAZZ?

Joseph Szigeti, concert violinist, speaks kindly of jazz. He thinks it has had a good influence on the performance and appreciation of music generally.

"Not jazz," says Mr. Szigeti, "but the Victorian ballads—those laboriously sentimental tunes that oozed over the mind like heavy, sweet syrup—have done more harm to music than anything else. They slowed its progress. Jazz, on the other hand, has raised the standard of efficiency in playing music. It also has sharpened the receptivity of the listener. Great music will benefit from that."

Doubtless there are jazz-despisers who will say that this theory is a little like the one that holds it's a pleasure to hit yourself on the head with a hammer because you feel so good when you stop. There are other listeners who will say that, anyhow, jazz isn't so bad as swing. (And will they start an argument!)

Jazz enthusiasts agree with Mr. Szigeti and add that jazz has value in itself. George Gershwin, the greatest of the jazz composers, has been dead two years, yet his principal works are frequently played, sometimes on highbrow symphony programs. The final word on jazz and its place in music probably remains to be spoken a generation or two hence.

EASTWARD TO EDEN

Somehow we Americans always expect people changing their abode to move west. That is our tradition; it is the way the continent was occupied. So we are surprised to learn of settlers moving east. There have been cases in recent years of western families moving back to New England. But here is the most unexpected case that has come to notice.

Twenty-one California residents, comprising seven or eight families, are moving eastward in a caravan, to settle not even in an eastern state, but on an island in the sea. They will go first to Tampa, Fla., in automobiles, trucks and trailers. There they will buy a boat and transport themselves and their goods to a small island named East Caicos, in the Bahamas, several hundred miles out in the Atlantic.

The emigrants say they are planning a new way of life, where their old age can be comfortable, restful and harmonious, far from traffic, noise, pensions and politics.

May they find their Eden! To most Americans the information given doesn't sound altogether reassuring.

X-RAY TREATMENT IN EAR INFECTION

From time to time and from different parts of the world, physicians have been reporting excellent results in the treatment of chronic catarrh and deafness by X-ray treatments. The X-rays have been particularly helpful in old or chronic cases of catarrhal deafness. Failure to obtain results by X-rays as reported by some physicians is attributed to not giving the proper dosage at the right distance from sinuses and ears.

It is interesting to learn that in acute disease of the middle ear which so often follows or accompanies diseases of childhood, treatment by X-rays is now being used successfully.

Dr. A. H. Dowdy, in Radiology, states that the use of X-rays in these acute middle ear cases does not bring about the cure so much by killing the organisms causing the infection, but because X-ray treatment increases the number of white corpuscles in the blood. And it is these white corpuscles that fight and kill the harmful organisms, thus bringing about a cure.

Further, the sooner the X-ray treatment is given, the sooner are the results obtained. One of the reasons for the pain and distress in middle ear infection is the great thickness of the pus. This thick pus pushes against the surrounding tissues, including the drum of the ear, and causes the intense pain. The X-ray treatment has the effect of preventing the pus from becoming so thick, it becomes so thin that it can readily drain from the ear and thus relieve the pressure and pain. The little tube—eustachian—which carries air from back of throat up to inner side of ear drum is thus enabled to become more widely open and some of this thin pus drains out of middle ear into the eustachian tube to throat and can be coughed out.

Also, if pus is so thin and watery it can very readily drain out of ear drum through a small puncture or opening.

Dr. Dowdy's concluding statement is: "Roentgenotherapy (treatment by X-ray) has been of distinct value in cutting short acute catarrhal middle ear infection (otitis media); and in lessening the necessity for surgery in acute cases complicated by mastoid infection."

It is gratifying to know that X-ray treatment may prevent an acute case from becoming chronic which so often is followed by deafness or hard of hearing.

Whatever May Be Merits or Demerits of Reciprocal Trade Pacts, Court Precedents Uphold Them

By DAVID LAWRENCE

Washington, Jan. 27—Whatever may be the merits or demerits of the reciprocal trade agreements, the issue of their constitutionality stands out as one on which the administration can find ample defense in the precedents of the Supreme Court, even though the concrete statute in question has never been tested in the courts.

The testimony of Henry S. Fraser, constitutional lawyer, before the House ways and means committee was designed to create the impression that the trade agreement law is an unconstitutional delegation of power, but the objections cited therein will be used by the people on the other side of the argument to buttress their own case.

Thus, Mr. Fraser concedes that the name of the instruments, whether they be called treaties, conventions, covenants or pacts, is "an immaterial matter," and that there have been many instances of executive agreements in American history which have not been submitted to the Senate for ratification.

Very early, for example, in the growth of the American republic, the President of the United States made an agreement for the limitation of armaments on the Great Lakes with Great Britain, and for a long while it was not submitted to the Senate, though put into effect. Likewise, in 1882 an agreement was made with Mexico for the passage of troops across the border from either country and this was not submitted for Senate ratification.

All sort of pacts have been put into effect under Republican as well as Democratic Presidents in the last 30 years relating to quarantine inspection of vessels, admission of civil aircraft, postal matters, pecuniary claims, etc.

Mr. Fraser, while admitting that this has been the custom, attempts to say that these are all "relatively minor or at least non-controversial subjects," but clearly the power of a President to make agreements with a foreign government is not governed by the quality of the subject matter. Either the power exists or it doesn't. Mr. Fraser says that often "the practicalities of the situation" have been recognized by both houses of Congress where international agreements have not been questioned, because they could not be "submitted to the Senate without embarrassing and unduly delaying the ordinary conduct of our foreign relations."

This is precisely why the trade agreement power was sought by the department of state by delegation from Congress so that overnight changes in foreign tariff conditions might be met by the executive branch of the government without subjecting American interests to the embarrassments and delays of waiting for Senate approval. Foreign governments previously had played upon this disadvantage in point of time in conducting America's foreign relations. Mr. Fraser says that such international agreements as have been made to meet the "practicalities of the situation" are "quite valid since the presidential power to make them stems from the sovereignty of the nation and exists independently of the constitution."

What Mr. Fraser meant, of course, was independently of that provision of the constitution which specifically requires Senate ratification of treaties. The trade agreements, however, are all temporary arrangements. The agreements provide for various contingencies, such as currency depreciation or the rise in tariff or in quotas and a host of other questions that really make them not treaties in the accepted sense but working arrangements based on our own tariff-making.

As early as 1890, the tariff laws authorized the President to suspend by proclamation the privilege of importing five named commodities duty-free from countries whose tariffs on the agricultural or other products of the United States deemed to be "reciprocally unequal and unreasonable." The Supreme Court of the United States upheld the constitutionality of that law. In that case the court pointed out that the President was not authorized to make a law or treaty, but Congress merely made the President an agent of the law-making department to declare the event upon which its own expressed will was to take effect.

Again in 1897, under a Republican regime, Congress delegated power to the executive, but specified certain conditions under which treaties would have to be submitted to the Senate. Likewise, certain tariff changes had to be submitted to Congress. No actual test has been made in the courts as to whether Senate ratification or congressional approval by both houses is necessary. However, the executive power to accept from Congress delegated authority to change the tariff laws within limits—known as the flexible tariff law—was upheld by the Supreme Court under the Coolidge administration.

The present system is really a unilateral action. Congress tells the executive that tariff changes may be made within certain prescribed standards. This has been done for the last twenty years by delegation of power through Republican congresses to Republican Presidents. A tariff duty in and of itself affects foreign relations because it is a tax on imports. Once the executive is told what tariff duties to impose it is equivalent to giving him the right to carry out the wishes of Congress. The fact that the executive uses his discretion, after consulting what advantages foreign governments will bestow on our exports, and then embodies it in a written understanding that binds the foreign government is no less a valid exercise of delegated power than when President Coolidge was authorized to raise or lower duties by 50 percent after studying all the facts relating to costs of production here and abroad.

French Woman Fashions
New Silks For AmericansBy ADELAIDE KERR
AP Fashion Editor

Fabrics for new silk suits that will go everywhere, from the office in the morning to a roof-garden at night, have been launched for the 1940 spring mode.

Some of them have made their debut because a little French girl once had to spend long, lonely hours in the family drawing room waiting "to play a piece for company." Then she was Paulette de St. Maur, granddaughter of the Marquis Alphonse de St. Maur. Today she is Madame Paule Madoc, fabric and fashion consultant for one of the country's leading silk fabric houses. She charts new color effects in classic weaves.

In the years when she sat in the drawing room in her long-skirted, ribbon-girdled frock, all the pent-up wrath she felt at being cooped up to play the piano instead of games went into nervously pleating ruffles into her ribbon sash. Rosettes and ruchings bloomed under her six-year-old fingers which acquired a strength and a feel for fabrics she keeps to this day. Moreover, she built up a firm determination to go places in smart clothes.

Years after an American marriage she uses all those pleats and ruffles in her work, which includes designing clothes for her own dressmaking establishment. She's as French as crepes Suzettes—talks with her eyes, her shoulders, her hands—but everything she makes is done to meet the demands of the American woman's busy life. She believes that the woman who often must work and play in the same clothes should go out in the morning "dressed in a way that fits a funeral or the opera." The answer, she says is a suit, an adaptable blouse that can do several tricks and the right, smart chapeau.

First of the new spring fabrics she has scheduled is a hounds-tooth checked silk suit, woven to resist wrinkling, crisp enough to tailor, soft enough to drape. She means it for suits that can take an airplane trip, come down without a crease and go on to dinner or the Fair. The collection also includes some colorful evening taffetas and striped silks and a great deal of classic black and navy blue bengaline, moire and faille.

Madame Madoc works with feverish concentration, with ruler, pins, thread, tossing a lot of staccato French around the atmosphere. When she is working out a new stripe, for instance, she charts it first on paper, like an engineer, with ruler and pencil. Next she sets pins along each side of a narrow fabric strip and draws colored threads back and forth until she gets a pattern she likes. Then the music she studied as a child comes into play. Fabrics as well as music, she says, must have rhythm to be good. She looks at the stripes, sits back and hums "Mmm - mmm - mmm." If the "rhythm" isn't right, she rips out the threads and works it over till she has the rhythm she wants. After that the weavers adapt the pattern to a classic silk.

Using fabrics of the 1940 spring collection, Madame Madoc has done some amusing tricks with suits. She has designed one of black faille with a softly tailored jacket and a skirt which has a simple, shoulder-strapped, evening bodice top. With the

If you're going on a cruise for your winter holiday, don't forget the shoe shine boy. He's human, too.

He'll collect your shoes each night from outside your cabin door. If you have two pairs a night, then at the end of a two-week cruise, leave with the room steward (preferably the night steward) $1 to $2 in an envelope marked "Shoe Shine Boy" because you probably won't see him at the last minute. A woman usually will have fewer shoes shined and leave a smaller tip.

But tips aren't the only thing to the shoe shine boy, anymore than your salary is the only thing to you. He probably likes to be called by his real name rather than Tony or Tom. He shouldn't be made a butt for cheap jokes. And, if he has to do extra work, he should at least get a pleasant smile.

When A Gal Dates a Midshipman
She Ties Herself To The ClockBy JOHN S. GROVER

Annapolis—Romance punches a time clock at the United States Naval Academy.

The Drags' Handbook, a guidebook for dates just published by The Log, academy magazine, emphasizes the handicaps imposed on romance by official regulations.

The midshipmen have to be home before the girls they date. They have, at most, $10 a month to spend. (Try orchids on THAT budget!)

They can't have cars — can't even enter cars.

They must dash off to formation just when the dusk of afternoon is getting romantic.

Still Tops

But official red tape has failed to decrease the week-end crowds of finishing school lovelies who flock to Crabtown for hops. Regulations or no, Debbie still rates a navy date as tops. (There's something about a uniform.)

Drags who date regularly at the academy must be a hardy crew to fit in with the rigid rules. If they arrive before 1 p. m., nobody meets 'em. The middies are still at formation. Regulations frown on chivalry while in uniform, and a middle is always in uniform.

Carrying the girl friend's baggage isn't forbidden, but it's disapproved. Respect for the uniform is again.

The same reason bars greeting the OAO (navy slang for one-and-only girl) with a kiss when she arrives. No cap tipping, either. They must dash off to formation just when the dusk of afternoon is getting romantic.

nial sidewalks if she wants to go. The bar against entering autos during the academy year is inflexible.

After the dance, there's no let-up in regulations. First classmen get an hour to take their drags home and return to quarters, second classmen 50 minutes, third classmen 40 minutes. That's rushing romance.

And, the Drags' Guide warns ominously, the worst thin a drag can do is late-date (accept another date after her midshipman has been forced by regulations to return to beddy-bye.)

College Boys Laugh

St. John's College boys, who have no time-clock regulations, chuckle at the Drags' Handbook declaration that late-dating "simply isn't done." They ain't talking, but they know better.

So maybe it's no wonder dates in Annapolis are so popular. There's glamour and the uniforms and the lure of old tradition at the naval academy hops, in company with a handsome midshipman, even if the regulations are rigid.

And if a girl is simply too, too weary to cope with any more regulations after her midshipman has gone home, there's always a St. Johnnie handy.

Mid - Winter Is Inventory Time,
Time To Brush Up On Beauty

BRUSH FOR THE EYES—to draw mascara clear to the tips of the eyelashes. This is Lorraine Day, movie starlet.

By BETTY CLARKE

AP Feature Service Writer

Mid-winter is time to take inventory of your make-up habits. First of all, remember the thorough cleansing that is always necessary to get the best effect with your make-up. Secondly, remember to protect your skin from chapping.

Then here are some hints to remind you that your hair is not the only place to use a brush:

1. After you have used a clean puff to apply powder to your face and neck, dust off the excess with a brush to give your skin a smooth-as-satin look.

2. Don't forget the brush is a valuable aid in the application of lipstick. A brush enables you to put lipstick on smoothly and evenly. And when you protect your skin from chapping, don't overlook your lips. The surface must be soft and firm for the lipstick to produce the best effect.

3. Proper care of the eyes is one of the most important requisites for feminine beauty. You can make your lashes look much longer if you brush mascara or lightly—and clear to the tips of the lashes.

4. If you want to create an illusion, handle your eyebrow pencil lightly—almost like a brush. Never, never draw a line. Sleep is an excellent aid to eye beauty.

BLOOD RUNS COLD

YESTERDAY: Miss Wells agrees to tell Kincaid's new address, privately, Christine suddenly thinks of the cigarette lighter, initialed A.J.W. It is missing from her room. Miss Wells admits that it was her lighter which she lent to Kincaid.

Chapter 11

Mother And Brother

I WENT on down the stairs. There was one thing I was sure of. Miss Wells hadn't been home last night, and I was sure she knew something the Sergeant hadn't been able to pry out of her.

In the lower hall I ran into the ubiquitous Sergeant. "Anything else you've forgotten to tell me?" he inquired wryly.

Before I could answer, a colored man, a big lumbering fellow as tall as the Sergeant, came up the stairs from the basement. He stood before us, shifting from one foot to the other, regarding the Sergeant uneasily.

"I'm Patrick," he said. "Well," said the Sergeant, "what were you up to last night?"

Patrick scratched his head and smiled uncertainly. "I wasn't up to nothin'."

"You should have been here at six o'clock last night to fix the furnace, and you didn't show up until this morning."

"To tell you the honest truth I had just a drop too much, Cap'n."

"Drunk," the Sergeant snorted. "Then you weren't near this house the whole evening, I suppose."

"No, sir, I was uptown."

"All right, run along."

Patrick ran gratefully. "Come into the shop, Miss Howarth," the Sergeant said.

So I gave up lunch with considerable regret and followed him into the room. Mr. Kimball was there with a woman and a young chap.

The Sergeant introduced me. "Miss Howarth, this is Richard MacDonald and this is Mrs. MacDonald, Joan Kent's mother."

Mr. Kimball brought in some chairs from a room in the back of the house and we seated ourselves. I hadn't the faintest notion why the Sergeant wanted me there and I was a little afraid of what might happen.

The Sergeant glanced through his notebook, leaned against Mr. Kimball's desk and addressed us. "Mr. MacDonald was out of town last night. He left because his father was ill."

He spoke in such a detached way that I couldn't tell whether he was making it clear to us why the boy had been away or why he was going over it in his mind. My own mind was a hopeless muddle. Joan and Richard were related, but why was her name Kent?

"This is terrible," Mrs. MacDonald said in a low voice. She looked pretty bad and the boy's face was pale and drawn. I looked at him again, and then I was sure that he was the young man I'd seen in the Knife and Fork last night with Joan Kent.

The Sergeant went on with his oration. It seems the woman and Richard MacDonald had come to the city immediately from some where on Long Island when Mr. Kimball called them. They were under the impression that Joan had been hurt but was still alive. The shock had been terrible when they found she had been murdered.

"Now let me get this straight," Sergeant Long said. "You are Joan's half-brother," he indicated Richard. "And your present husband, Mrs. MacDonald, is Joan's sister."

The woman nodded. "You were married twice, and Joan is the child of your first husband and Richard the child of your second marriage."

"Yes."

"There are no other children?"

Richard's Story

SHE shook her head. The Sergeant's questions seemed to drain the little strength she had. She was leaning back in the chair, her hands hanging limply at her sides. Not a pretty woman, I thought, but there was something very smart about her. And there was a strong resemblance between her son and herself, and yet he seemed to have inherited mainly her poorer features: a decided awkwardness about the mouth and chin and a pleasant face lacking strength.

I was so busy listening to the Sergeant that I didn't notice when Dirck Koff came in with Mr. Norton.

"He says he's a lawyer," the detective informed the Sergeant. Dirck was grinning at me over Norton's shoulder.

"I telephoned and asked him to come," I said quickly before the Sergeant recovered from his surprise.

I could feel the color come up in my cheeks as I introduced Dirck to everyone.

"Mr. Koff is my lawyer," I said. "If you don't mind I'd like to have him represent me."

The Sergeant, after a rather grudging acknowledgment of his presence, raised an eyebrow at me, but he drew up a chair for Dirck beside mine and said nothing.

Out of the corner of my eye I looked at Dirck. He still made my heart do a tap dance and I couldn't imagine why. I've met handsomer men. He wasn't much taller than I and he was too thin, but he had nice eyes and an alert, inquiring look that reminded me of an intelligent fox terrier.

The Sergeant turned to Richard. "I don't like having to question you at a time like this, but there are some important points to be cleared up."

The young man nodded. "I'll be glad to help you all I can. We must get this settled. When I find the person who did this, I'll—his voice trailed off miserably."

I was sure he was really fond of his sister and hadn't anything to do with her death. But I was certain, too, that the Sergeant thought otherwise. Dirck's eyes flashed back and forth from the Sergeant to the MacDonalds.

The Sergeant began by telling Richard that I'd seen Joan crying in the hall last night. "Was she going up to your apartment?" he asked him.

"Yes, she came up once a little after seven. But I wasn't in. Then she came up again later, a few minutes after I got home from the office."

"And she still was crying then?" He nodded. "She had a letter from Mother that Dad wasn't well and might have to have an operation. It upset both of us terribly. We went out to dinner a little while after that, and it was then I decided to go home on the ten o'clock train to see just how ill Dad was."

"So it was you Miss Howarth saw with Miss Kent at the Knife and Fork?"

"I guess so. We had dinner there," he said, looking at me curiously. "Why did you keep your coat and muffler on while you were there?"

"I don't recall that I did."

"Miss Howarth seems to remember it very clearly," the Sergeant said with peculiar emphasis.

"No One Saw You?"

DIRCK'S eyes caught mine at that, and he depressed the corners of his mouth. I looked away hastily.

"I may have kept it on, at least for the first few minutes. But I'm certain I didn't eat dinner with a heavy coat on."

"It isn't possible that you had a reason? Perhaps you didn't want Miss Howarth to be able to identify you?"

He flushed and glanced quickly at the Sergeant. "I didn't have the pleasure of knowing Miss Howarth last night."

"And your sister didn't mention that she'd seen her in the hall?"

"No."

The Sergeant was silent for a moment. "Well," he said, "you might as well tell the whole story now. What did you do during the evening?"

Richard MacDonald took his handkerchief out of his pocket and mopped his face. "After dinner we both came back to the house and I went upstairs to pack. That took me only a few minutes. When I was ready to leave I stopped in to say goodbye to Joan."

"Was she alone, and what time was that?"

"She was alone, and it was about quarter past nine, perhaps a few minutes before that. She was reading and wasn't going to see anyone because she'd had a cold for the last few days, and then she was worried about Dad, too. Then I stopped in the shop to say goodbye to Uncle Nick. He raised his eyes to Mr. Kimball."

The Sergeant turned quickly to the boy's mother. "Did you see your son when he got home?"

"No," Mrs. MacDonald looked up at the Sergeant. "What was that, Sergeant?" she murmured.

The Sergeant gave her a slow, patient look. "Did you see your son last night when he got home?"

"No," she said finally. "No, I didn't see him. I'd gone to bed."

"The house was dark when I got home," the young man said hastily. "So I didn't disturb anyone, but went right to my room."

"What time did you get to Williamston?"

"About 11:30."

"Did you see anyone when you got off the train?" He leaned forward so that his eyes were on a level with Richard MacDonald's.

"No. There wasn't a soul around, not even a taxi cab, and I walked from the station. It's quite a distance from the house, two miles or so."

"No one on the road at that time of night, I suppose?"

"No one."

"How long did it take you to walk it?"

"Half an hour at least, probably more. It was snowing hard."

"Why didn't you waken your mother if you were so worried about your father?"

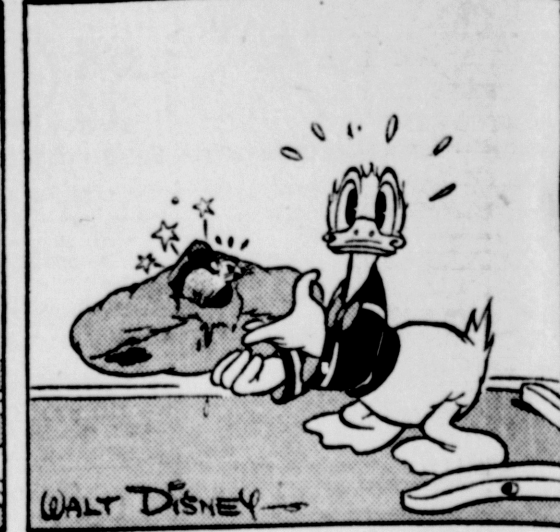

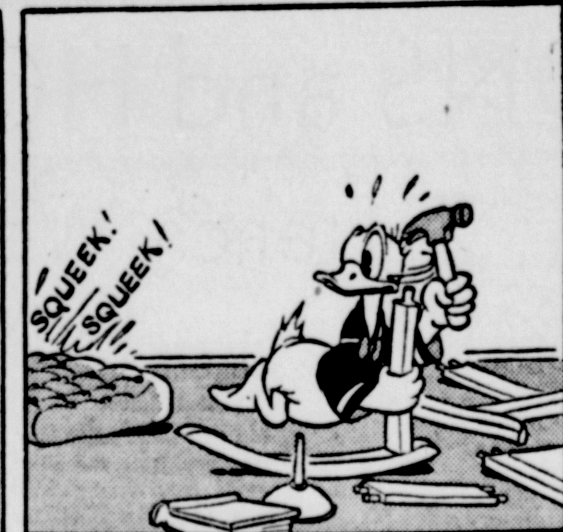

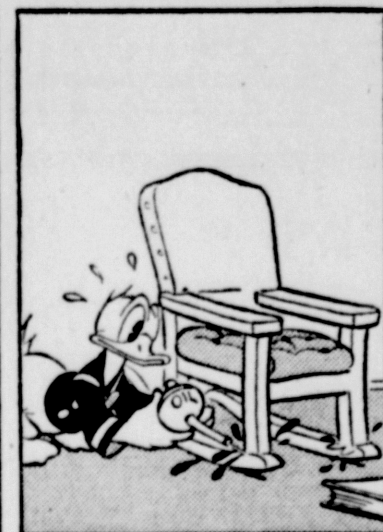

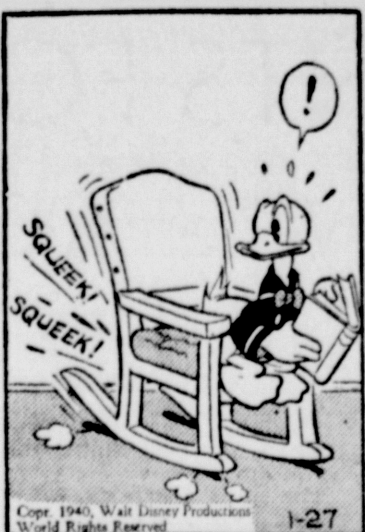

Richard MacDonald's voice was tired when he answered. "I decided to wait until morning. There was nothing I could do any more that night."

"So no one saw you at all after you left here about 9:15? You have no way of proving that you were in Williamston at midnight?" The Sergeant's voice was ominously low.

The young man was staring at him, his face haggard. "No," he said after a long moment. "No, I have no way of proving it."

Lots of flat tires wish they could meet a girl with a little jack.

We did not suppose they had such cars today.

The midget auto was speeding down the road, about every 100 feet it would hop into the air three feet or so, then dash on.

Finally an officer halted the driver in bewilderment.

Officer (barking at the driver)—Say, am I crazy, or what's wrong with that puddle-jumper?

Driver—Nothing, officer. I'm sorry. It's me. I've got the hiccoughs.

You don't pay much to insure your car. What costs you so much is paying for the wrecks the other people have.

The young lady entered the stationery store and asked for a can of floor wax.

Clerk—I'm sorry, miss. We only have ceiling wax here.

Young Lady (snapping)—Don't get fresh with me. Whoever heard of waxing a ceiling?

Nothing depreciates so rapidly as appreciation unless it is an expensive automobile.

Mrs. Suburbs (to tramp)—Out of work, are you? Then you're just in time. I've a pile of wood to be cut up, and I was just going to send for a man to do it.

Tramp—That's so, ma'am? Where does he live? I'll go and get him.

A traveler back from Canada says that in Alberta, in gratitude for a ride, three chickens laid eggs on the seat of his car, thus providing him with a free breakfast.

Uncle—Well, Dick, my congratulations! I hear you are engaged to one of the pretty Robbins twins.

Dick (heartily)—Rather! Uncle—But, how on earth do you manage to tell them apart?

Uncle—Oh, I don't try.

With these new high-speed cars, pedestrians can hardly distinguish the motorist's horn from Gabriel's.

A good vocabulary comes in handy at times.

Don't you think that you ought to brush up a little on your correspondence? Use big words; they lend dignity to your letters.

Other law partner (calmly studying the end of his cigar)—Perhaps you are right, but, while eschewing mediocrity of expression through platitudinous phraseology, it behooves one to beware of ponderosity, and to be mindful that pedantry, being indicative of an inherent megalomania, frustrates its own aim and results merely in obnoxiousness.

This suggests another simpler words would serve better:

A man was asked to state his opinion on an important matter but he declined on this ground: "Not knowing with the slightest degree of accuracy, I would not presume to substantiate or elucidate, fearing that I may err therein."

He had been walking with one foot in the gutter and the other on the pavement, and he was not getting on very well. After about half a mile he met an officer:

Officer—You are drunk!

Drunk—Oh, is that what it is? Thank God! I thought I was lame!

If these chronic "horn honkers" heard what their friends said about them it would burn their ears. Not only that, it is confusing other drivers—and dangerous. Don't be a honker—a goose is that.

Highland Meeting On Rural Youth

Highland, Jan. 26—The activities of rural youth was the subject considered Tuesday night at the meeting of the Women's Club of Southern Ulster held with Mr. and Mrs. John J. Gaffney, Miss Lois Welker, who informally talked over the American Youth Hostels which has recently become an institution in this country. The idea became a fashion in Europe 30 years ago and not long ago was adopted here. The eastern loop runs through the Berkshires with the headquarters at Northfield, Mass. Miss Welker with two companions enjoyed a vacation last year with the hikes that brought night stops at the hostels where they found lodging while they prepared their own meals. This form of vacation has become so popular that such loops are to be found across the continent.

E. B. Bower, county 4-H executive followed Miss Welker and told in detail the beginnings of 4-H work in general and in Ulster county since 1929. Mr. Bower had been county agent for the past three years. He has now about 275 clubs and 300 boys in the various clubs. Commodities tended slightly lower. Cotton figures were up two to six points at the close after an early drop. Wheat finished 1/4 lower to 1/4 higher. There was a break in silk prices and silk broke under $3 for the first time since November. Sugar markets were firm; Cuban raws were offered at 2.88 cents a pound, duty paid. The price of domestic copper again was cut 1/2 cent a pound by a leading smelter, to 11 1/2 cents, as demand continued slow. Nearly half of the two-cent rise now has been wiped out.

Reports to the Federal Reserve Board from about 265 department stores showed that sales last week had maintained a four per cent gain over the 1939 week. The New York area did better than the average, gains being 7.7 per cent. Boston, St. Louis, Kansas City and Dallas areas showed losses over last year averaging from one to three per cent.

Pennsylvania R. R. showed net of $32,032,529 for 1939 compared with net of $11,046,100 in 1938. New Haven's loss in 1938 of $11,623,193 was cut down to loss of $2,914,114 in 1939.

Tire shipments in 1939 were best since 1929 and 32.1 per cent above 1938.

General Foods is expected to show 1939 net of around $2.75 to $2.90 a share vs. $2.50 in 1938.

Steel output in the Youngstown district is expected to drop about four points next week, to 66 per cent of capacity. Southern district is holding up.

British purchasing commission is expected soon to announce soon an order for $19,000,000 worth of Lockheed planes, not including engines or propellers.

Pittsburgh Coke & Iron's net of 44 cents a share on outstanding shares in the final quarter of 1939 compares with net of two cents a share in the like quarter in 1938.

Frigidaire has announced a sharp reduction in retail prices of 1940 models of their household refrigerators.

ICC has disapproved of the proposed canal connecting the Ohio river and Lake Erie. Finds it would cost railroads around $35,000,000 annually in revenues.

Collins & Aikman yesterday declared an extra of $1.75 and a dividend of 25 cents on common. Curtis Publishing declared dividend of $1 on $7 preferred stock; leaves accumulations of $19.37 1/2. Twenty-three vice-presidents of the United States were of English descent.

Thomas Jefferson was the first secretary of state of the United States.

The first recorded abdication of a sovereign was Sylla, the Roman dictator, in 79 B. C.

New York, Jan. 27 (P).—Stock market traders again held to the maxim "let well enough alone" today and, aside from quiet strength in aircrafts and specialties, price variations throughout the list were meaningless.

Had it not been for the liveliness of a handful of issues selling under $5, the two-hours' volume would have been a mere dribble. As it was, transfers approximated 300,000 shares. Analysts studied the news without deriving much bullish inspiration. Lightness of offerings, though, tended to cheer those who contend important commitments on the long side are still intact and that whenever any real activity has cropped up it usually has been on a rising trend.

The question of just how far the recessionary curve in a number of business and industrial lines would go once more was put forward as a prime purchasing handicap. In addition, Wall Street's apparent inability to determine which way the national political winds are blowing remained as a retarding speculative influence.

Bonds and commodities were sluggish and slightly uneven. Among stocks, Commonwealth & Southern and United Corp. turned over in blocks of 10,000 and 12,000 shares at 1 1/4 and 2 1/4, respectively. Continental Motors started with a trade of 10,000 shares at 4 1/4, up 1/4.

Dow Chemical, Loft and Transcontinental & Western Air touched new 1939-40 highs. Supported also were Douglas Aircraft, Glenn Martin, Lockheed, Bendix, Sperry, Bethlehem Steel, Santa Fe, and N. Y. Central.

Preferreds of Standard Gas tilted upward while those of American Power & Light weakened.

A shade behind most of the time were Chrysler Motors, Ward North American, International Nickel, Standard Oil of N. J. and Goodyear.

Annual K. of C. Ball
Next Friday Evening

One of the outstanding events of the current social season will be held next Friday evening at the Municipal Auditorium, when the 21st annual charity ball under the auspices of Kingston Council, No. 275, Knights of Columbus, will take place.

As has been the custom for the past 20 years of presenting an outstanding program of concert music, entertainment by leading artists of the stage and radio, and music for general dancing by two orchestras, this year finds a program that is again well-balanced for a most delightful evening.

Teddy Powell and his orchestra, "America's New Band Sensation," featuring Ruth Gaylor and Jimmy Blair, song stylists, will be the main attraction at the ball. Mr. Powell is the author of "Boots and Saddles," "It's All Over Town," "Bewildered" and many others, and will feature these numbers in a delightful concert, as well as playing the popular hit tunes of the day. Alternating with Teddy Powell in supplying scintillating music for continuous dancing will be Bob Steuding and his orchestra. The entertainment will consist of six or more top-notch acts, and will be presented promptly at 9 o'clock.

The general chairman of the ball is Peter J. Halloran, who is assisted by the following committee chairman: Patron, William F. Leehive; music, Joseph J. Murphy; entertainment, Andrew T. Gilday; advertising, Patrick J. Murphy; publicity, Walter L. Foster; floor, Bernard A. Feeney; tickets, Michael C. Abdallah; checking, John F. Finn; door, Gustave Kogel; refreshments, Thomas L. Cloonan and Edward F. Moran; decorations, Florian P. Wingert; and William J. Dwyer; reception, John J. Egan and Col. Frank L. Meagher; auditorium, Martin P. Nilan and J. Addison Freer. Miss Teresa V. Brophy will again have charge of the flower and cigarette booth. Members of the Catholic Daughters of America will assist the chairman of the refreshment committee.

The purpose of this annual event is to raise funds for the K. of C. Charity Fund, and the entire proceeds of the ball are expended for non-sectarian charity. The patrons of the ball are again urged to make a quick response to the tickets mailed out, so that the work of the charity fund will not be retarded in any way whatsoever. The public is cordially invited to attend this 21st annual affair to enjoy an evening of entertainment and to assist in supporting the worthy cause of charity.

Upon their arrival at the lake, the students lost no time in getting into their skating shoes. There was fun aplenty, punctuated with thrills and spills in the hockey contests. Later there was dancing in the casino, followed by a buffet supper, with students gathered around the huge fireplace. When appetites were satisfied, dancing and skating were resumed, continuing until 11 o'clock, the hour of departure.

Arrangements for the party were made by members of the Moran Student Council—Lillian Benjamin, Janet Vetsokis, Alfred Flowers, Fred Remm and Joseph Winters. Faculty members in attendance included the Misses Catharine and Helen Morgan, Mr. Williams and Mr. Morgan.

May Boy or Girl of 14 Be Allowed to Send Out Invitations Alone? Accent on Importance of Youth Is Offset by Training in Social Knowledge

This is perhaps a good question for discussion. Is the fashion of allowing a boy or girl of 14 to send out invitations alone in best taste or is it one of the unwise accents on the importance of youth? There is much to be said against catering to youth's selfishness. On the other side there is much to be said for the training in social knowledge which actual responsibility alone gives.

A letter from the mother of a boy of 15 fits into this discussion: "Is a tea dance too feminine to give for a boy? He wants to receive his guests alone. This sounds strange to me—even improper, since the girls will come without chaperones. He and I have both agreed to do what you advise. And will you tell me what type of invitations to send, and the wording?"

I agree that a tea does rather suggest a party for a girl. But in any case I think it would be much nicer to call it a "small dance" and give it in the early evening. Preparations would be essentially the same. That is, you would have music to dance to, and simple refreshments for one party as well as for the other.

He is right about receiving alone. You and his father should of course be present but in the capacity of guests rather than as host and hostess. On the other hand, it is proper (as an assurance to the mothers of the girls) that you and he together send out the invitations. But it is considered correct to send the invitations in either of two ways. Under the engraved Mrs. Henry Brown Green on your visiting card, you write "and John Green." And then below his name: Small dance, 8:30 to 10:30 Saturday, February 3rd. R. S. V. P.

If the dance is to be very small, John may perfectly well send the invitations himself. In this case he should write notes: Dear (your or Dear Jim), will you come to dance on Saturday evening, February 3rd, from 8:30 to 10:30? Sincerely, John Green.

Bridge Party Refreshments
Dear Mrs. Post: Please tell me whether champagne would be incorrect to serve with evening refreshments after a large bridge party. If not, what type of refreshments do you think would go best with champagne?

Answer: Champagne would certainly be correct, though of course it does suggest not only a formal but a fairly substantial supper. One thinks, for example, of caviar and cold meat and salad and not of cakes and sandwiches. (Released by The Bell Syndicate, Inc.)

Mrs. Post is sorry she can no longer answer personal letters. She is glad, however, to have many printed slips on a variety of subjects to offer to her readers. Today's slip is "Conventional Party Menu." Be sure to send a three-cent stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request to Mrs. Post in care of this paper, P. O. Read Loved Poems
For Companionship

You are never alone when you have loved poems at hand. Reading Walt Whitman's famous "I Hear America Singing," you see an army marching before you—an army of peace. The worker, the mother, the wife happily sing. And as warming as the voice of a friend are these lines from "Abou Ben Adhem" by Leigh Hunt: "I pray thee, then, write me as one that loves his fellow-men." The angel wrote, and vanished. The next night it came again with a great wakening light. And showed the names whom love of God had blessed, And lo, Ben Adhem's name led all the rest.

For courage, there's Henley's "Invictus." Remember the lines: "I am the master of my fate; I am the captain of my soul."

Read these, other loved poems complete in our 32-page booklet. Includes favorites by such famous poets as Stevenson, Kipling, Longfellow, Wordsworth and again!

Send 10 cents in coin for your copy of WORLD'S BEST-LOVED POEMS to Kingston Daily Freeman, Home Service, 635 Sixth Ave., New York, N. Y. Be sure to write plainly your NAME, ADDRESS, and the NAME of bookst.

DRY BROOK

Dry Brook, Jan. 27—Mike Todd is visiting friends in Andes. John Edwards and son, Casper, were callers of George Stewart, Friday.

Mr. and Mrs. Paul Rosa and daughter, Dianne, spent Sunday at Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Stewart's home in Low Beach.

The church dinner at Mrs. Reginald Todd's on Thursday netted $8. The women completed the church fair quilt.

Miss Anna Haynes of Kingston spent the week-end here with her parents.

The community hall meeting was well attended and the various committees were appointed to make possible the construction of this building.

The game of chess is of ancient origin and was introduced in Europe by the Arabs.

Aristotle wrote about cheese in 350 B. C.

Hydrators not only are big, but they have glass tops, and in their dewy-moist atmosphere fruits and vegetables can't wilt, dry or spoil. The new double-duty shelf gives extra storage space and can be used in two positions. The ice cube compartments lift out and leave the cubes loose.

Now all these things are scientifically based on studies of feminine convenience. No wonder Frigidaire goes straight to the heart of every woman who sees one.

You may now see each 1940 model, on our second floor.

ACTUALLY it was exciting, like watching the stage curtain go up on a "first night," when we had our first look at the brand new 1940 Frigidaire.

After that one all-appraising glance, we were glad all over again that we are selling Frigidaire — because they're going to be so easy to sell.

Just let a woman see those new stainless chromium shelves! The new glass-covered fruit and vegetable hydrators! That sliding shelf that will fit wherever needed from day to day! The extra-large meat-tender. The beautiful one-piece "Rock of Gibraltar" cabinet, strong but beautifully contoured, with new interior color—

But to start at the beginning, we wish to announce that the 1940 Frigidaire year has begun. Two carloads of the new models have arrived. There are two series, both strikingly beautiful — the standard series, and the Cold-Wall series.

We are showing every model in both series.

For some weeks now, many questions have been asked about the new Frigidaire, so today our GUIDEPOST will attempt to answer a few. Here's a typical question asked just the other day: "Are the new models better than last year's?"

The answer is, you can't keep Frigidaires from growing better and better any more than you can make a river run uphill—it would be "agin' nature!" What science has accomplished in the last year, in general, is to make the new Frigidaire keep food safer even longer, freeze ice quicker, yet cost less while doing so.

Speaking of costs, we'll take this opportunity to answer several questions about that. Every year for 10 years Frigidaire engineers have been able to reduce current cost. This year—1940—is an important milestone, for the cost of operating a 1940 Frigidaire has been reduced to half what it was in 1930.

There you are! Frigidaire is no current-hog. Every Frigidaire has the famous Meter-miser, the simplest, most dependable refrigerating mechanism ever built.

Only Frigidaire has it, but you get it in any model, regardless of size or price, and with it a 5-year protection plan against service expense.

A question asked often since the introduction of the Cold-Wall principle was made last year is, "Are the Cold-Wall models expensive?"

How to Play POCKET BILLIARDS

By Charles C. Peterson
Famous Trick Shot Star

(This is the first of a series of lessons on the fundamentals of pocket billiard play. Mr. Peterson is a noted fancy shot billiard player and an outstanding authority, referee and teacher. His annual tour to colleges, clubs and recreational centers has done much to popularize the game.)

There are several important points a billiard beginner should know before he starts to play. He should face his shot squarely, then turn one half to the right, the body bent forward so the right arm can swing freely. The head should be over the cue, which is sighted as one sights a rifle.

The left hand rests on the table to form a bridge for the cue. The weight is evenly distributed on both feet and the player should feel comfortable at all times. The cue should be level with the table. Avoid, whenever possible, shooting down at the cue ball.

Keep your head directly in the line of vision of the shot. Hold your cue lightly at the balance and don't try to strangle it. Keep your bridge firm and your cue straight. Follow through on each stroke and leave your cue in the line of aim. Avoid a long bridge. Do not move your bridge hand until the stroke is completed.

Brooks Scores Win Over Naccarato

Dave Brooks defeated John Naccarato in a tournament match at Nick's last night by a 100 to 59 count. Johnny tried hard to break into the win column and a run of 27 made the match a little closer but Brooks who had 19 for his high run stayed ahead throughout the match.

Sunday evening Bob East and Tony Pino will meet in the only game of the day, the usual afternoon contest being postponed.

Ellenville High Plays Here Against Maroons Thursday

Given a week's respite due to the New York State Regents' Board, the Kingston High School basketball team had a week off following the Liberty clash which it won by a close margin.

Due to the Knights of Columbus Ball scheduled for the municipal auditorium next Friday evening the Kingston-Ellenville DUSO match has been moved up to Thursday. Fans of the local team are requested to note the change in the playing date.

P.S.C. to Rule on Grade Crossings

Lieut. Boss was the first witness called and testified to police records of accidents at Broadway, Tremper avenue, Smith avenue, Gage street, Foxhall avenue and Flatbush avenue crossings. The examination was conducted by Corporation John M. Coshin. The records of accidents concluded the city's direct case.
Commissioner O'Connor then requested information regarding cost of relocation of the Wallkill Valley line and Mr. McCaffrey testified that the estimated cost would be $387,492 of which $25,500 was for land damages.
Mr. McCaffrey also gave the estimated costs of the elimination of the various crossings which are included in the $5,631,621 project. The Flatbush avenue share would be $241,320 for the overpass of which $56,000 would be for land. Foxhall avenue overpass would cost $260,547 of which $44,000 would be for land damages. Ten Brock avenue overpass would cost $197,792 with $80,200 of the sum for land damages. Hazel street cost would be $45,190 with $19,200 of the sum for land damages. The superstructure at Broadway would cost $65,700 and approaches exclusive of bridge and abutments $17,400 and the land damages at Broadway would be $35,500.

Sequence of Construction
Asked as to the sequence of construction and the plan for maintaining traffic while the railroad was being lowered Mr. McCaffrey said that the plan would be first to relocate public utilities, water mains, etc., and then construct a wall along the west side of the cut. Steel piling would be put down and the earth trenched out behind the piling and concrete poured in and the wall erected. One line of tracks would be run through this cut back of the wall until the wall on the other side was put in place. A second line could be run on the east back of that wall. The earth between the walls then would be removed and the new line laid. When completed the back fill would be placed behind the walls where the temporary tracks had been and the new project would then be finished by putting in switches, etc., from the new line to factories.

A temporary highway over Foxhall avenue during construction would maintain traffic.
No objection to the plans made by the Railroad and no examination of witnesses was made by the railroad's attorneys.
It was stipulated that traffic over the Wallkill Valley was light. There are two regular freight trains a day each way and no passenger trains. Testimony was given to the effort that to depress the West Shore road would make it necessary to relocate the Wallkill Valley line.
The Department of Public Works of the state offered by a letter to cooperate on any way with the plan for elimination.
Mr. McCaffrey stated that during the construction period it was planned to secure easements over adjacent property for construction rights of the railroad temporary location of the temporary tracks. On Greenkill avenue this could be done on city owned property but north some construction easements would have to be secured. The cost of these construction easements were included in the total cost of the project.

Addresses Commission
Joseph Pierce was permitted to address the Commission and advanced the idea that the proper way to eliminate the recent crossing without damage to any property in the city was to run the new line of the railroad along the river bank where it would be out of the way and damage no property. Commissioner O'Connor said that this was the first he had heard of such a plan. He called attention of Mr. Pierce to the fact that the elimination plan had been given careful study for several years so far as I personally can recall and the engineers believed the present plan was the best possible. Mr. Pierce said this was his first appearance at any hearing.
The only other comment on the plan was from property owners who sought to know whether their property would be affected and City Assessor Moore from taking maps answered these inquiries.
Father Drury of St. Mary's church stated his objection to the plan on behalf of St. Mary's cemetery and the hearing was closed.

'City of Flint' Arrives in U. S.

By ROBERT BRUSKIN
Baltimore, Jan. 27 (AP)—The freighter City of Flint, rusty and ice-flecked, pulled into an American anchorage for the first time in four months today, writing finis to its strange odyssey of international adventure.
From the lips of the 4,953-ton ship's skipper, Capt. Joseph A. Gaimard, and from his doughty crew of 41 came again the story of the Flint's capture by a German man-of-war, an enforced voyage with a German prize crew to Murmansk, Russia, and finally release off the coast of Norway.
The re-telling was none the less dramatic. Gaimard smiled broadly as he praised the "splendid behavior of my crew."

Winter Sports Hailed in Parks

Become More Popular, Says Annual Report; 13 Gains Listed.

WASHINGTON.—The annual report of the national park service discloses that winter sports have increased in the parks, while listing 13 major accomplishments for the year.
The report also criticized "selfish" interests which it was charged acted as a deterrent to incorporation of the Kings canyon region of California into the park system.
Park Director Arno B. Cammerer reported that support for the Kings canyon project has increased rapidly, however, despite "opposition from various selfish interests."
Creation of a national park in the area has been authorized by the house of representatives and reported favorably by the senate committee on public lands and surveys. Efforts to bring the wild Kings canyon country under federal supervision were begun in 1931.

Five Monuments Added.

Cammerer's summary of the most important 13 accomplishments:
1. Addition of these five national monuments and three national historical shrines to the system: Fort Laramie National monument, Wyoming; Federal Hall memorial, New York city; Ackia Battlefield National monument, Mississippi; Homestead National monument, Nebraska; Badlands National monument, South Dakota; Santa Rosa Island National monument, Florida; Hopewell Village National Historic site, Pennsylvania, and the Old Philadelphia Custom house, Pennsylvania.
2. Acquisition of the historic Chesapeake and Ohio canal, which will be administered as one of the recreational areas of the National Capital parks.
3. Acreage increases at Carlsbad caverns; Dinosaur National monument, Utah; Arches National monument, Utah; and Glacier Bay National monument, Alaska.
4. Successful culmination of a long effort to acquire the Carl Ina tract of giant sugar pines for addition to Yosemite National park.

Sliding Most Popular.

5. A strong upward trend in winter sports use of the parks, with skiing leading in popularity.
6. Agreement between the park service and the forest service to cooperate in promoting protection of the Appalachian trail, leading through the eastern mountainous areas from Maine to Georgia.
7. Establishment of a 10-year low record of fires in the park system.
8. Completion of the new Frijoles lodge in Bandelier National monument, New Mexico.
9. Co-operation of Yellowstone and Yosemite park operators in an effort to design a satisfactory minimum cost prefabricated housing unit for visitors.
10. Provision of new type winter accommodations at Fort Jefferson National monument, Florida, by the anchoring of a houseboat off the historic fortress to furnish meals and rooms.
11. Revision of existing national park fees and establishment of new fees of a more uniform nature in line with the governmental policy to establish the national parks more uniform nature in line with the governmental policy to establish the national parks more nearly on a "pay-as-you-go" basis.
12. Accomplishment of necessary and important work projects through continued use of Civilian Conservation Corps labor. Outstanding was the assistance in timber salvage and cleanup activities for fire protection, following the September, 1938, hurricane and floods in New England.
13. Continued co-operation with states.

Bees Worth More Than Honey, Expert Declares

ST. PAUL.—Which is more valuable, the bee or the honey?
This is one of the questions answered by M. C. Tanquary, professor of apiculture at University farm in his new bulletin, "Beekeeping in Minnesota," issued by the Minnesota agricultural extension service.
Bees are worth from 10 to 20 times as much as the honey they produce, mainly because of their work in pollination, the bulletin maintains. In it, Tanquary shows the relationship between beekeeping and other phases of agriculture and points out that Minnesota, with an annual yield of several million pounds of honey, is rapidly coming to the front in this industry.

Texas Flax Growing

Successful growth for three consecutive years, has convinced the growers that new varieties of flax from Argentina, Brazil and India are adaptable to the Texas Gulf Coast region. Incidentally, this will supply raw materials to cotton oil mills to replace the declining quantities of cottonseed. It is an important fact that the yield per acre in Texas is 17 bushels whereas that of Minnesota and the Dakotas states long established in flax production—averages only six bushels. The prime value of flax seed is its oil content which, as linseed oil, is one of the main elements used in manufacturing paint.

Force in One Atom To Raze Skyscraper

Process of Releasing Vast Energy Is Explained.

WASHINGTON.—At the annual exhibition of the Carnegie institution, Dr. Merle Tuve and his associates showed for the first time the process by which they can release more than 200,000 electron volts of energy from an atom of uranium with the use of only one-thirtieth of an electron volt of energy.
This tremendous "dividend" was not discovered until about a year ago in Germany. Many laboratories have duplicated the original experiment.
Such a tremendous release of energy raises the problem of whether one atom which was struck in the bombardment with atomic particles might create enough particles of high energy to set off many of its neighboring atoms in a "chain reaction" similar to the explosion of a bunch of firecrackers. The resulting explosion might be greater than any yet generated by man, even though it were produced from only a small pinch of uranium, which is being used in the experiment.
If such power could be generated and controlled, it would eliminate coal, oil and water as sources of heat and energy. Dr. Tuve declared:
"Up to the present, however, no observations are reported or known at any laboratory which indicate that a chain-reaction definitely will occur. On the other hand, it must also be stated that no data exist which would show that a chain-reaction definitely cannot proceed."

Stronger Enemy
Manchester, Eng., Jan. 27 (AP)—(Via Radio)—Winston Churchill, first lord of the admiralty, today characterized the Germany of 1914 a "stronger enemy" than the Nazi Germany of today.
In a speech in Free Trade Hall, Churchill said he doubted the ability of the Germany of today to withstand the reverses as did the Kaiser's people in the last war.
"I always hesitate to say anything that tends to underrate the formidable character of the foe we have to fight," he said. "Yet, I cannot rid my mind of the thought of the imperial Germany of 1914 was a stronger enemy than the Nazi Germany of today."

Frequently during his speech Churchill was interrupted by hecklers shouting, "We want Mosley" (Sir Oswald Mosley, British Fascist leader) but the speaker, as soon as order was restored, carried on without comment.
Churchill said he had no idea what the war would cost but he believed that France and England in money and man power "can and will outlast the enemy."

city opposed this on the grounds that no deductions had been made from profits for wages of the proprietors and that no depreciation or interest on capital had been shown in the accounting. Testimony was offered by the city showing that had proper deductions been made from the income claimed the business would have shown a loss.
Justice Schirick held that the findings of the commission, that the business had no value is correct and that no award should be made. His memorandum in part says:
"As the Court reads the Bishop case, (Matter of Board of Water Supply, 211 N. Y. 174) the value of a business under this statute depends upon profit. At page 185, the court states:
"Where, as in this case, the decrease amounts to a total destruction of the business at the place where it has been conducted, it is essential in showing its value to ascertain the profit that was derived from it."
"Upon the proof offered by the claimant allowing for the deductions authorized by the Bishop case, the Commissioners were justified in finding that no profit was earned by the claimant, and that no value was established."
"The report is confirmed."

Average American Family Cannot Afford New Home

Most American housing is sold a second-hand market and today per cent of the homes being planned and erected are so costly that one family in ten can afford to buy a house that is new, the research staff of International Correspondence schools says.
A study by the staff indicates that the home building plan or program today is missing its primary market of more than 500,000 families with incomes of from $1,000 to $2,400 a year. Most families in this group are forced to live in rented second hand homes in congested areas, study found. If they attempt to attain tenancy and purchase homes, many of them are compelled to buy houses that are badly in need of improvements and maintenance.
America to keep abreast of the need for 700,000 new houses and 200,000 replacements, each year is building on an inverted scale, or a scale that answers the need of one family in ten. The other nine families must continue living in what they regard temporary quarters until they can acquire the means with which to buy a second-hand property.
Housing costs, it is pointed out in the research reports, seem to be a 1929 scale, for not even a 20 per cent reduction in both labor and materials would enable more than 1 per cent of the families to purchase new homes. One out of every four families was satisfied or could acquire a suitable new house in the twenties.
Some construction authorities believe that large scale building projects will solve the problem, especially in heavily populated centers. Others pin their hopes on the prefabricated house. Still others recommend partly finished homes to which the owners can add modern conveniences as incomes will permit.
